Subject: RE: Microsoft settlement

We read constantly about how microsoft is more than willing to settle with all concerned in the litigation and still some still want more. The Microsoft company seems to be trying to offer a just settlement and it is beyond belief that some states can't come to terms with their excessive demands.

How long and how far does some of these people want to go before they trash a good company that has given so much to our country and so many people.

It is our hope that all these matters can be settled in due time and in an expedient manner.
